

The Big 3 at CDS

BARRY REYNOLDS (left)

They call him the big bear, the friendly giant, the captain. But belying his towering presence and extra-firm hand shake is a plastics veteran who enjoys connecting polymer processors with products that meet their specific needs. Barry Reynolds is one of the founding members at CDS and has over 30 experience in representing resin and machinery manufacturers within the plastics industry.

FRANCO PECORA (right)

CDS is the house that Franco built. After extrusion equipment supplier Metaplast was acquired in 1997 by one of its competitors, Mr. Pecora and three other ex-Metaplast employees founded CDS. Possessing a keen sense for industrial design and quality workmanship, Franco created CDS on the premise of delivering quality, reliable products that came with a high level of customization and after-sales service.

ANTONIO PECORA (center)

Before he even got his social insurance permit, Antonio Pecora was greasing chains and hauling heavy-duty equipment around at Metaplast, where his father worked as a plant supervisor. It was by dabbling with all facets of the manufacturing cycle — from welding to assembly — that gave Antonio a deep understanding of CDS's downstream extrusion products and how they applied to different production processes.
